Erosion Control Test In Schulte Road Area

By Dick Heuer

A major experiment in controlling erosion along the Carmel River is underway in the Schulte Road area near Mid Valley.

Over 30 acres of land have been lost to erosion over the past nine years in the area between the Egg Ranch and Schulte Road bridge. Sediment from the collapsing river banks has been deposited downstream, where it forms sand bars that divert river flow against the fragile banks. This causes a vicious circle of additional downstream erosion problems.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, through its Carmel River Management Program, is now completing the third and final phase of a project intended to stabilize three-quarters of a mile of river channel upstream from Schulte Road bridge.

According to Graham Matthews, a hydrologist with the Water Management District, the project is experimental because it uses mainly low-cost post and wire revetments and planting of willows, rather than concrete riprap, to guide the river flow. This low-cost method has a disadvantage, however, as it requires time for the vegetation to become established. Unusually high river flows during the next year or two could wipe out much of the work.

Severe erosion problems along the Carmel River began after the 1976-77 drought. The drought, plus increased pumping of ground water to supply the Peninsula's growing water needs, killed streamside vegetation in the vicinity of Cal-Am's wells. The roots of this vegetation, the willow roots in particular, hold the sandy riverbank soil in place. With the vegetation gone, riverbanks collapse when river flow is directed at them.

Matthews said severe erosion has occurred since 1978 with relatively low river flows -- flows that are far below flood level. The entire middle reach of the river, from the Village to below Schulte Road bridge, has lost its equilibrium.

The Carmel River Management Program was formed in 1983 to deal with this problem. It is funded by a benefit assessment on riverfront property owners, a small fee paid by all consumers of water produced by Cal-Am and Water West, and

Farr Blasts Caltrans Hatton Canyon Plan

Assemblyman Sam Farr is stepping up pressure on Caltrans to change its design of the planned Hatton Canyon Freeway. In a November 3 letter to Thomas Pollock, District Director of the California Department of Transportation, Farr harshly criticized Caltrans for being unresponsive to community concerns about the freeway design.

Farr wrote, "I am at a loss to understand why Caltrans is taking positions on this project which will surely lead to a very difficult relationship between Caltrans and the community. The approach taken by your staff to date has, in my view, been minimally civil, and, at times, not even that."

What has Farr so upset is Caltrans' unwillingness to consider in good faith alternatives to their design.

According to Farr, the need for the freeway and its route through Hatton Canyon are not at issue. Farr and other community leaders are most concerned about Caltrans' plan for an overpass rather than underpass at the Carmel Valley Road intersection, and, especially, the plan to put the freeway on an elevated berm 25 feet high and 150 feet wide between the Carmel Valley Road overpass and another overpass at Rio Road. At this height, the freeway would pass the Mission Inn at approximately third floor level.

Farr has called this berm "the Lower Carmel Valley dam." Others have referred to it as a "Berlin Wall" separating Carmel from Carmel Valley.

Other outstanding design issues on which Caltrans has agreed to make some modifications in response to community pressure relate to the Carpenter Street interchange and the amount of cut and fill in Hatton Canyon.

Farr is seeking to establish an appropriate process for objective consideration of design alternatives. He wants Caltrans to establish a formal working group with local, state and federal elected officials, local, state and federal highway officials, and representatives of the local residential and business communities.

This working group would then identify a mutually agreeable design consultant to provide an objective view of workable design alternatives. According to Fred Keeley, Farr's principal staff aide, local business leaders have agreed to help pay for such an independent design consultant.

As of press time, Caltrans had not responded to Farr's letter.

Farr's seven-page letter to Caltrans summarizes the history of his past efforts to deal with Caltrans on the design issue. The following paragraphs set forth highlights.

At the time the Hatton Canyon route was selected, but prior to Caltrans providing any specific design concepts, the Hatton Canyon Citizens Advisory Committee was abandoned by Caltrans. In a letter to Farr earlier this year, Caltrans indicated that a similar committee may be established to deal with design concerns. To date, however, Farr said he has received no indication that such a committee was being established.

Specific concerns about the design were brought to Farr's attention by members of the community. Farr wrote that he then "attempted to involve a group of well-experienced local citizens and elected officials who are concerned about this project. However, making any progress toward an acceptable specific design was made very difficult because of the style and substance of response from your staff on this project. During meetings in my district office and during a lunch meeting at a local

Angel Cabral: A Star In The Making

By Grace Darcy

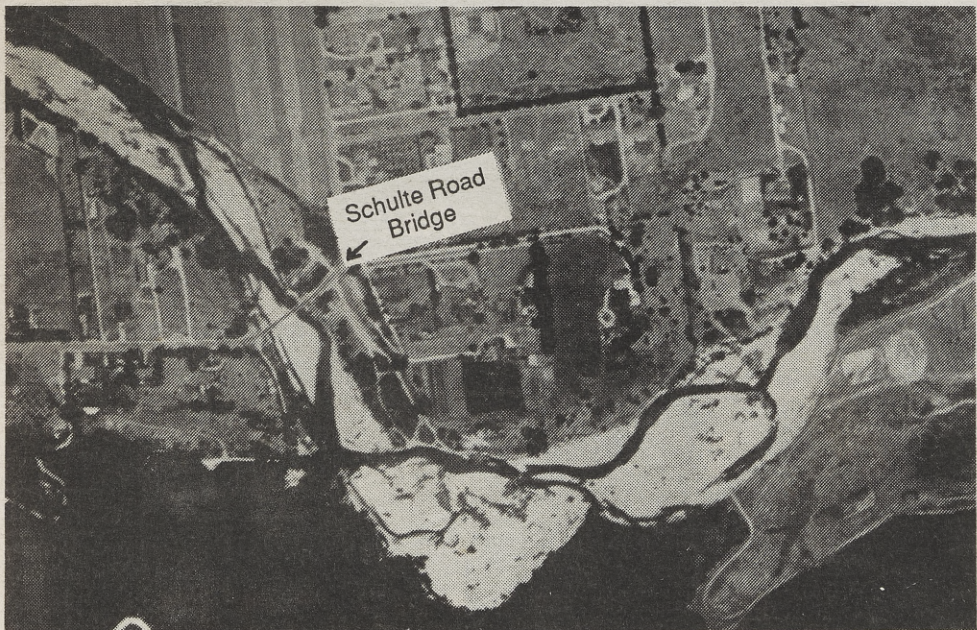

Angel Cabral is a mischievous, lively eight year old with dark brown eyes, long brown hair, and a great big smile. Like most girls her age, Angel likes to sing, dance, and act, but unlike other little girls, she doesn't do these things to please her mother, father, or favorite aunt -- rather, she sings, acts, and dances because she is preparing for her future in the world of entertainment.

Angel earned her first pay check when she was 16 months old. Her family lived in Hawaii at the time, and she did a United Airlines commercial, earning $100 for her appearance. At 3 1/2 years, Angel won the title of "Queen" in a baby show in Salinas; then, returning to Hawaii, she appeared in a brochure published by a Hawaiian resort.

In Carmel Valley again, Angel has been involved in local productions since she was five years old. She was "Hour #5" in the Hidden Valley production of Cinderella; was an angel and a gingerbread girl in Hansel and Gretel, a ballet produced by Western Stage (Hartnell), and was a munchkin and a flying monkey in Western Stage's production of the Wizard of Oz.

According to Angel's mother, De Cabral, "It all started when Angel's chorus teacher told me she put Angel up front because she was the first to learn the words to songs and because she has a strong voice."

Sun Is Seeking New Employees

The Sun is seeking a new editor. Our current editor, Grace Darcy, would like to continue writing for the Sun, but without her management responsibilities. We need someone to assume overall responsibility for the editorial content of a growing paper. This is a part-time job, preferably for a local resident with journalistic experience. If the new editor would like part ownership of the paper, that could also be considered.

Depending upon how the editorial job is filled, we may also need an ad salesperson or even an advertising manager.

Interested persons should contact Dick Heuer at 625-2325.

On Really Being Humane

Regarding article in the November 11 issue entitled, Helping Stray Dogs and Cats, the four instructions were very helpful and very much appreciated; however, when I read "allowing animals to remain in your area provided only with food from misguided citizens but denied proper shelter, companionship and medical care is not kindness," I must be one of those "misguided citizens."

I have traveled a good part of this world and have seen animals suffer greatly, especially in third world countries; however, if given the opportunity, I would feed any hungry animal as I would human being. The greatest suffering of all is hunger, because the need is so immediate.

Cats are great hunters and this valley is full of field mice and gophers. Shelter can be found in cold weather. Animals, especially cats, know where to go when the weather gets too cold. There are all kinds of nooks and crannies in nature; there are barns, sheds, under houses and so on.

I traveled on the road for many years, and much of that time I had the opportunity to experience the kindness of many citizens in this country, and I'm sure glad nobody came by with a cage and carted me off, eventually putting me out of my misery. It seems to me there are much more "humane" ways of dealing with this monumental problem.

We don't go around picking up street people and putting them to sleep because they are "cold and are not getting medical attention." If we are kind hearted, we feed them and give them shelter.

If we were really in harmony with nature there would be feeding stations in various areas for wild animals who could not fend for themselves. Animals could be captured, altered, and released. I'm basically referring to cats. Dogs need much more care, and I realize it is impossible to let dogs run wild. A cat or any animal can feel a great deal of love if it knows where its next meal is coming from. If I am a misguided citizen, so be it.

I like Doris Day's way of dealing with animals. She takes them in and finds good homes for them and, if she can't find a home for them, she takes care of them until she does. Correct me if I'm wrong, Doris.

Too many animals are being killed in the name of "being humane." There have got to be more profound solutions.

A friend of mine had three beautiful kittens about four months old picked up the other day. They are gone now, but their spirits are still living in the trees. People with land and money could be a great help to the animal kingdom.

Anti Mountain Bike

This is in response to Jack Arnold's pro mountain bike, anti horse letter (November 11, 1987). For approximately 18 months meetings have been held in front of the Regional Park Board where all sides of the mountain bike use in Garland Ranch Regional Park were discussed. The Park Board agreed to a bike trial period of six months even though the Carmel Valley Property Owners Assn., the Equestrian Trails Inc., the Trail and Saddle Club and Carmel Valley Trails Assn., organizations representing many people, and a petition of 270 plus signatures were presented urging the prohibition of bikes in the park. Had Mr. Arnold attended these meetings he could have stated his views and heard the reasons for banning the mountain bikes in the park.

The objection to bike use was the danger to other park users trails which are steep, narrow and have blind curves — on nature hikes, hikers and equestrians were justifiably concerned with the possibility of meeting head on a downhill ridden mountain bike rounding a blind curve.

The bikes were banned after the 6 month trial period because they did not obey the signs and rode where they were not permitted. By so doing they endangered other park users. Since the ban there are mountain bike riders still using the park.

Mr. Arnold refers to hikers and environmentalists as elitists. However an elitist belongs to a powerful minority. Hikers, environmentalists and equestrians are not in the minority in Garland Park. The mountain bikers are. In order to join them one must be young and in excellent physical condition to ride in this park. On the other side we have all ages from young to very senior citizens as environmentalists, walkers, hikers and equestrians.

Somewhere there should be suitable land for the co-existence of mountain bikes and traditional users but Garland Park's steep trails do not lend themselves to this combined use.

Perhaps Mr. Arnold should contact the Monterey Co. Parks Department, the Santa Monica Mountain State Park, the Catalina Island Conservancy, and Griffith Park in Los Angeles and ask why mountain bikes are prohibited on trails in their parks.

AIDS and Safe Sex

Does Safe Sex reduce the transmission of the HIV(AIDS) virus? Abstinence is a safe way of avoiding infection with this virus, but the reality of life is, that few will choose this option as a preventive measure. So now we have the task of addressing Safer Sex. Whether one is Homosexual or Heterosexual does not put one at risk of getting infected. The unprotected sex act is what is risky. The first step for prevention, is to be honest to ourselves about our own sexual practices. Is there such a thing as the perfect, morally, and acceptable sex act? Maybe we need to take a good hard look at human sexuality, and rather than to condemn, we should learn and try to understand. No one expects you to agree with a particular sexual behavior or lifestyle. If we learn to understand each other, open our minds only then can we begin to talk about this complex issue of Safe Sex.

Hospice Plans Larger Inpatient Care Center

Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula has announced plans to build a new, 24-bed inpatient care center in Monterey. The new facility would replace the existing 6-bed care center on Carmel Valley Road.

The future of the current Hospice center at Mid Valley has not been decided. Completion of the new center is at least three years off, so there is no need to make a decision now about the Carmel Valley facility, explained Susan Freeland, Vice President for Communications and Development. Freeland told the Sun that the Carmel Valley facility may continue in some form as part of the Hospice program, possibly as a residential care home.

The expanded care center will be built on 3.5 acres donated by the Pebble Beach Company at the so called Old Capitol Site, east of Highway 1 in Monterey. This is an area slated for future development by the Pebble Beach Company.

The expansion is being planned for economic efficiency and to accommodate increased need for hospice services.

Robert Brower, Chairman of the Hospice Board of Directors, explained that many costs involved in operating a skilled nursing facility are fixed costs that remain the same regardless of size of facility. With the new, 24-bed center, cost per bed day would be reduced from $580 to $135. This will bring patient cost down to a level that can be reimbursed by insurance. It will also reduce the Hospice's long-term dependence upon charitable gifts.

The current Carmel Valley facility has had an occupancy rate of 90 percent, with a waiting list on some days. The elderly segment of the population, which is most likely to need hospice care, is growing rapidly. By the year 2020, there will be two-and-a-half times as many people over 65 as there were in 1980.

There is also a growing need for pediatric hospice care. According to the American Cancer Society, more children ages 3 to 14 die of cancer than any other disease. Stanford Children's Hospital and UCSF Hospital have started referring Peninsula children to the hospice care program.

Saddle Mountain Tree Lighting Scheduled

For many residents of Carmel Valley, the holiday season begins when the lights on the Christmas Tree on Saddle Mountain come on. Since 1963, the Christmas Tree has brightened the holiday season. Traditionally, the tree lights come on in conjunction with a party. When the tree was first lit by a group of Mid Valley neighbors, they held a neighborhood party. The Mid Carmel Valley Volunteers took over the tree project in 1976 and, since then, the lights have come on with a ceremony and open house at the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Station. Each November, the volunteers make the trek to the tree to prepare it for the upcoming holiday season.

This year, the holiday season will officially begin with the annual Tree Lighting Ceremony and Open House on Friday, December 4th, at 6 p.m. The actual lighting takes place between 6:30 and 7 p.m. Each year, the Mid Valley Volunteers invite a local resident to be the official Tree Lighter. This year, Barbara Proctor, a resident of Tierra Grande, will light the tree. Ms. Proctor is a valued friend of the Fire Department and will share her community spirit with others at the Open House. Egg Nog and goodies will be served, and everyone is invited to this get-together for friends and neighbors.

We hope to see you there, and we hope the spirit of the Christmas Tree brightens your holiday season.

CVCYC Wants To Chase Holiday Blues

The holiday season often brings on the blues rather than the joy that we are supposed to feel. The Carmel Valley Community Youth Center is offering a support group for people dealing with some of the following dilemmas during the holiday season:

The anticipation that Christmas will change things; Being alone during all of the festivities; Being overloaded with seasonal duties and responsibilities: gift buying, house decorating, sending cards, making items, homemade cooking, etc.; Too little money; Family traditions and childhood memories bubbling to the surface; Handling issues concerning mixed cultures and religions in the same family; Stress; The blended family — "Who will the kids spend the holiday with?" and Remembering last year at this time, and other significant anniversaries.

Judy Masliyah will facilitate the group. Ms. Masliyah has an MA in Counseling Psychology and is an MFCC Intern who has over 14 years of counseling experience. She has a part time private practice and is a staff therapist at the Family Resource Center.

The group will meet for 5 Sunday afternoon sessions from 3:30 — 5:30 p.m. beginning on December 6 and running through January 3, in the Activity House at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center. The fee will be $20 for the series (or $5 per session) for CVCYC members and $30 for the series (or $6 per session) for non-members. Community Thanksgiving Dinner

Once again, the Community Thanksgiving Committee comes together to celebrate Thanksgiving as a community — not as just feeding the poor and needy or providing something for those lonely hearts or desperate souls, but as a celebration of the "thankfulness" we all share as a community. To this end, we bring a portion of our goods to share and celebrate with our neighbors and to be together as a community this Thanksgiving Day.

Let's join together as neighbors in a way that reflects the ideals set forth by our founders at the very first Thanksgiving gathering. Bringing food, service, and ourselves is a token of the gratitude and thanksgiving for the blessings we appreciate regardless of the greatness or smallness of those gifts.

The tradition of the Monterey Peninsula Community Thanksgiving Committee is unchanged. Bring a dish to share and your table setting to the Fairgrounds on Thanksgiving Day. Dinner will begin at 1 p.m. and end at 5 p.m.

We look forward to seeing you on Thanksgiving Day!

Holiday Hazards For Pets

From Thanksgiving through New Year's, holiday activities are usually very hectic, filled with parties, irregular eating schedules, and last minute shopping. With all the hustle and bustle, the SPCA reminds you not to forget the needs of your family pet(s). A few reminders are set forth here to make this holiday period safe and enjoyable for everyone:

- Traditional holiday plants, such as Mistletoe, Holly, Poinsettia, and Jerusalem Cherry should be kept out of your pet's reach. These plants contain substances that, if ingested, are capable of causing severe illness in a dog or a cat.

- The Christmas Tree itself is not toxic but could cause a badly upset stomach for your pet that eats the needles or drinks the water from the holder. Keep an eye on your pet when he or she is near the tree. Train your pet to stay away from it.

- Dangling electrical cords, breakable ornaments, lit candles and garbage cans overflowing with turkey bones may pose many dangers to the curious or mischievous pet. Place these items out of your pet's reach.

- No matter how cute the begging, resist the temptation to indulge your pet with holiday goodies. A sudden change in diet can cause intestinal problems that both you and your pet will regret.

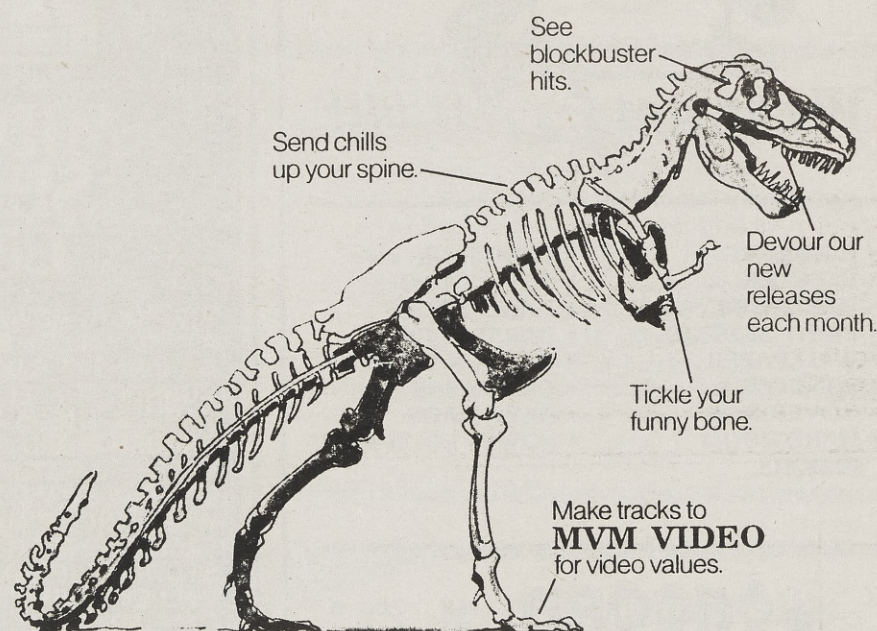

- Don't allow your pet(s) to play with wrappings or ribbons. The animal can easily become entangled or swallow something and strangle.

If you notice your animal acting strangely during this particular time of the year and suspect it might be caused because of the season, contact your veterinarian immediately. A delay could cause a major problem or even death.

Following a few simple procedures will insure that both you and your pet will have a wonderful holiday season.

Carmel Mission Inn Honors Peninsula Business Founders

The Carmel Mission Inn celebrated its 20th anniversary Saturday with a gourmet dinner honoring other Peninsula businesses that have also operated under the same ownership for at least 20 years.

Rob Chatham, the current President of Chatmar, Inc., was fifteen when his late father, Hugh Chatham, opened the hotel 20 years ago. At that time, he recalls, the area at the mouth of the Valley was mostly hayfields and dairy land. The only nearby buildings were the fire station and the Los Gatos apartments, which have since been torn down to make room for the shopping center.

Another sign of change is cost. When the hotel opened, rooms averaged $12 for a double and $15 for a room with a king-sized bed.

Hugh Chatham picked the hotel location because of its proximity to what even then was planned as the Hatton Canyon freeway. Twenty years later, the freeway still hasn't been built, but the hotel has prospered. Initially a Holiday Inn franchise, the hotel is now independent but affiliated with the Best Western reservation system.

Hugh Chatham moved to the Peninsula in the mid-1960s, after leaving his successful San Francisco furniture business to his son, Hugh Jr. The entrepreneurial bug soon bit him again. Seeing a need on the Peninsula for a family hotel that offered comfort and value, he turned to his friend and Holiday Inn founder, Kemmons Wilson, for a franchise. The success of the hotel proved to other hotel chains that the Peninsula was a viable, growing market.

To celebrate the anniversary and honor his father, Rob Chatham decided to pay tribute to all the founders of long-term Peninsula businesses. Through the chambers of commerce, Chatham identified 130 Peninsula businesses that have operated under the same ownership for at least 20 years. He invited their founders to a Founders Dinner on November 21.

The five-course, gourmet banquet was, indeed, a fitting tribute. The food was so outstanding that the chefs were brought out from the kitchen to receive the applause of 200 appreciative guests. Plaques honoring 20 years of business service to the community were presented to each of the founders in attendance.

Featured speaker for the evening was former Senator Bob Murphey from Texas. His rural, East Texas humor charmed the happy audience.

Thanks to Bloodmobile Donors

The Red Cross and the community are grateful to those who generously gave blood when the Bloodmobile visited the CV Community Chapel on November 12.

This beautiful watercolor of the Carmel Mission is on exhibition at the Carmel Valley Library and is the work of 16 year old Miguelin Dominguez, a sophomore at Carmel High School. Miguelin has exhibited at the Red Door Gallery in Morro Bay; Beeches Gallery, Carmel; Great Western Savings, Carmel, and at the Monterey County Fair. Two of his paintings are in the Community Hospital collection.

Miguelin, a handsome, dark-eyed young man, studied under watercolorist Nancy Johnson. He was commissioned by the Carmel Stamp Club to design a philatelic envelope commemorating Pope John Paul's visit to the Monterey Peninsula. About 1500 envelopes were printed and distributed nationwide.

The painting will be reproduced in the Carmel High School yearbook.

Angel Cabral

Subsequently, the same teacher was involved in the production of Oliver at Western Stage, and invited Angel to participate.

"I was an orphan boy, and later a rich girl," Angel said of her participation in Oliver, "and then at the very, very end, I was a poor girl."

More recently, Angel was one of the twin children in the Western Stage production of The King and I, and was the second cook in the Hello Dolly segment of Frohman Academy's All You Need Is Love, a tribute to the 60s.

If these accomplishments are extraordinary for an eight year old child — and they are — Angel also is a very ordinary little girl. She is in the third grade at All Saints School. "I like school a lot," Angel said, "even though third grade is harder than second."

She does well in school. "I had all A's except for two which were B+'s," she said.

Her favorite subjects are Math and Reading, and she has an extensive library at home. "I have a whole shelf full of Beverly Cleary books, and all of Peggy Parish's books. I also have Judy Blume's books." She also has some Nancy Drew books.

"She's either reading or singing," De Cabral said. "She's really a delightful little girl."

She studies acting, singing, and dancing at the Frohman Academy, but says she likes singing the best. She also is taking private voice lessons, is studying the piano, and enjoys ballet and jazz dancing lessons. "After school, my whole week is filled," she explained.

De Cabral is not a pusher. "I sit back and observe," she said. "If Angel likes something enough to try it, we try it."

Perhaps some of De's understanding of Angel's needs and talents comes from her own experience as a dancer. "I've been a dancer all of my life," she said, "and Angel's grandmother, Donna Hamilton, taught dancing."

Angel has her own personal ambitions. Asked what three things she would wish for if wishes could come true, Angel was explicit: "First, I want to be a singing, acting, and dancing star. Second, I want to buy a big house, and third, I want to earn a million dollars."

Angel also is selective about which of her many classes she enjoys the most. "I probably like ballet and jazz dancing the same," she mused. "I've taken ballet since I was almost three years old, but I've just started with jazz dancing."

She is an unspoiled child, despite all of the attention her talents demand. She is proud that her birthday is the same date as Tom Selleck's birthday — January 28. Her taste is eclectic. For example, her favorite pop singing star is Whitney Houston, but she also likes Liza Minelli ("I saw her in person"), John Denver, Michael Jackson, and Barbra Streisand.

Her mother takes her to shows as often as possible. "I've seen Cabaret and Hello Dolly," Angel said enthusiastically, "and I've also seen Michael Jackson's Thriller. I saw John Denver live."

Having such a multi-talented daughter must be difficult for her mother, but De Cabral takes Angel's gifts in stride. "There isn't anything I can think of that I would enjoy more," she said. "Just being able to support her is wonderful, and I'm glad I can do it."

Mother and daughter are extremely close. "I think we have an open relationship," De said. "We're very close. I've never talked down to Angel; rather I talk to her like she was what she is — a little person. We even say our prayers together."

Naturally, Angel has encountered children with "bad attitudes." According to De, Angel does not admire such children. "She has a good head on her shoulders," De said. "I'm firm, I discipline her, and

Angel and her mother, Dé Cabral

I'm not afraid to do it. I always tell her 'I love you' before administering the discipline."

"Angel is a very spiritual child with lots of depth," her mother said.

Like other children, Angel has to work for the money to buy the little extras most youngsters want or need. She works at her grandmother's restaurant, The Iron Kettle, in Carmel Valley Village. "I like to set and clear the tables and wash the dishes," Angel said.

"She has grown up in The Kettle," De said.

As a single mother, De is thankful that Angel has a "wonderful, positive male person in her life." That person is Dennis Thush, her grandpa. "Dennis is the apple of Angel's eye and vice versa," De said. "She calls him Baba."

De also helps her mother at The Iron Kettle. "I'm a professional 'extra,'" she said. "When we lived in Hawaii, I did a lot of work in shows like Hawaii Five-O, but I don't have those connections here."

Nevertheless, De did play the part of Pearl, a nurse, on the Simon and Simon show, and has done a dozen "mainland shows." "Over in Hawaii, I knew everyone. Now, I'm not only being available for Angel, but I'm also making contacts for my own career," De said. "The theatre is in my blood, too."

De lauds her family for their support. "I couldn't do this without family support," she said. "Angel feels inside that she can do it, and if you want something badly enough, and work hard enough, you'll get it."

Angel's most recent work is a 15 minute film entitled To Your Health by Mack and Eva Productions. She plays a concerned granddaughter who helps her elderly grandfather understand that vitamin supplements are necessary for healthy living.

Her most recent award is the Jesters Improvement Award from the Frohman Academy, an award of merit in singing. She places it next to the many pictures she has drawn that decorate the walls of the cheerful Carmel Valley apartment she shares with her mother. The drawings are happy and done in vivid colors. Perhaps these "pictures from her soul" best illustrate the happiness, security, and confidence that Angel possesses — rare attributes in one so young.

Prediction: Angel Cabral is a birthing nova that one day will burst upon the theatrical scene as a full-fledged star. Promise: We'll be in the audience, applauding!

ZINC and the COMMON COLD

There have been recent articles in popular health magazines based upon a study in Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy — a journal published by the American Society for Microbiology — on the use of zinc gluconate lozenges as a treatment or cure for the common cold and other Rhinovirus flu respiratory illnesses.

The study used zinc gluconate (25 mg. of elemental zinc) lozenges to treat people suffering from a common cold attributed to the Rhinovirus. In order to bathe the throat tissues where the Rhinovirus multiply, the lozenges were sucked on for ten minutes. Adults and youths dissolved one tablet every two wakeful hours, not exceeding twelve tablets per day; and children under 60 pounds received one-half tablet every two wakeful hours, not exceeding six tablets per day. The subjects stopped treatment only after their cold symptoms had been absent for six hours. The above dose is not recommended on a long-term basis because zinc overdose can actually lead to immune system depression rather than stimulation.

The results were highly significant. Cold sufferers who used zinc gluconate lozenges recovered in an average of 3.9 days. Those who used the placebo lozenges, (the control group), took 10.8 days to recover. In all, researchers found that people who took zinc gluconate lozenges recovered an average of seven days sooner than normal. The treatment worked as well for mild colds as it did for severe colds and helped even if the cold was not treated right away.

The study was prompted after a surprise discovery was made on a 3-year old girl with acute lymphocytic leukemia whose cold disappeared within several hours after she allowed a 50 mg. zinc tablet to dissolve in her mouth. (She suffered from frequent colds because of her leukemia.) The tablet was originally administered in order to stimulate T-cell lymphocyte responsiveness and to improve zinc status, but when she refused to swallow it and let it dissolve instead, the unexpected response of her cold disappearing led researchers to a double-blind placebo-controlled trial to test the hypothesis that zinc gluconate lozenges may be clinically useful in the treatment of common colds.

SINCE ZINC ACTUALLY KILLS RHINOVIRUS UPON CONTACT, IT IS IMPORTANT TO UNDERSTAND THAT ZINC SWALLOWED IN THE FORM OF A TABLET WOULD NOT WORK. Treatment worked in the form of a lozenge because of the zinc contact with the Rhinovirus. Dr. Bruce Korant of The Dupont Company has demonstrated this in test tube studies.

Unflavored zinc gluconate is not very palatable. To date though, zinc orotate is substantially less effective and zinc chloride and zinc sulfate are too painful and caustic to the mucous membranes. However, in a companion study zinc ascorbate and zinc aspartate seemed similar to zinc gluconate in the effects. Zinc gluconate lozenges are available on the market. Further studies are being conducted to produce even more definitive results.

Have You a Teddy Bear To Share?

The third annual Teddy Bear Drive, sponsored by the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, is under way.

If there is a sad, lonely Teddy Bear, or any other stuffed animal moping around your home, you can make the little furry toy much happier by donating her or him to the Teddy Bear Drive.

According to spokesperson Jackie Gash of the Sheriff's Department, "County residents are invited to drop off any stuffed animal — it doesn't have to be a Teddy Bear, and it doesn't have to be new." All stuffed animals are donated to the Women's Crises Center in Monterey where they become a part of the Teddy Bear Room.

"The children of women in crisis are brought into the Teddy Bear Room and invited to pick out whichever stuffed animal appeals to them," Jackie Gash explained.

She told of a woman who goes to garage sales and picks up stuffed animals for "a few cents." The woman then cleans the animals and they arrive at the Sheriff's Department looking like new.

* Please bring your donation to the Sheriff's office at 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey.

FINANCIAL FOCUS

Investing in Closed-End Mutual Funds

Most of the mutual funds you own are probably open-end funds, which are by far the most common type of fund available. However, there is another, less familiar kind of mutual fund — the closed-end fund — that may also deserve a place in your investment portfolio.

Before you can consider closed-end funds however, you first must understand what an open-end fund is. An open-end fund is one that can issue an unlimited number of shares, which are bought and sold at net asset value (plus any sales or redemption fees set by the fund sponsors). Net asset value (NAV) is the current value of the underlying securities divided by the number of shares outstanding. The NAV listings in the financial section of your newspaper every day under the heading "Mutual Funds" are for open-end funds.

In contrast, a closed-end fund has a fixed number of shares, which it issues in an initial public offering, or IPO, in the same way a corporation issues stock. (It's often possible to buy closed-end fund shares at the time they're first offered, particularly if you maintain your brokerage account at a major firm that regularly participates in underwriting syndicates.) Once all the fund's original-issue shares are sold, they begin trading like any other stock. Many are listed on major stock exchanges; others trade over-the-counter.

Closed-end fund shares do not trade at their NAVs, but at prices determined by investor demand. In some cases, the price may be higher than the NAV (i.e., the fund is said to be trading at a premium) or lower than the NAV (i.e., it's trading at a discount). Every closed-end fund has a stock symbol, and the share price is listed in the daily stock tables in the newspaper. (Note that even closed-end funds that invest in bonds are included in the stock tables.) To find out whether a fund is trading at a premium or a discount to its NAV, consult either The Wall Street Journal (under the heading "Publicly Traded Funds" on Monday for equity closed-end funds and on Wednesday for bond closed-end funds) or Barron's.

What are the advantages of buying closed-end funds? First, many of these funds have excellent track records and have provided reliable dividends and capital gains over many years. Second, many closed-end funds are very specialized, allowing you to choose very specific types of securities (e.g., convertible bonds, gold mining stocks) or particular areas of the world (e.g., Japan, Korea or the Pacific Basin region.) Third, closed-end funds allow you more flexibility in that you can buy closed-ends on margin and sell them short if you believe their value will fall.

Last, and perhaps most important, closed-end funds can enable small investors to benefit from the skills of some of Wall Street's most successful portfolio managers. In recent years, a number of highly respected and successful portfolio managers have introduced closed-end funds that they personally direct. The typical investor could never afford to retain one of these experts to manage his money, but he can buy shares in the expert's closed-end fund.

For all these reasons, you may wish to add certain closed-end funds to your overall investment portfolio. Your Financial Consultant can help you sort through the possibilities — both existing funds and initial public offerings — and help you select those that best fit your financial objectives.

Senior Citizen Health Check-Up Scheduled

Free health check-ups for older adults will be offered by the SCANS (Senior Citizen and Nursing services) program of the Monterey County Health Department. Persons over fifty-five years are eligible for this service. The Health Check-up is provided by the health team of SCANS, consisting of two nurses and a community service aide, who travel throughout the County conducting clinics where older people meet.

SCANS is a program to extend preventive health care and screening services to older adults. The purpose of the clinics is to identify health problems, give assistance in finding appropriate care and to teach good preventive health practices. The Carmel location is the Presbyterian Church. By appointment only. For information, call 899-4271

Law School Forum Scheduled

Monterey College of Law will hold an Open Forum for people interested in attending law school. The Forum will be held at the college on December 2, at 6:30 p.m. Reservations are required and may be made by phoning 373-3301.

Admissions Officer, Kip Hudson, and law students will describe the law college program of study, admission requirements, and job opportunities. Information will be given on the Law School Admission Test which will be given February 20, 1988.

Monterey College of Law is a community law school, accredited in 1980 by the Committee of Bar Examiners of the State Bar of California. Classes are held in the evening and most students are over 30 years old and work full time.

Hatton Canyon Plan

hotel, Caltrans' representative was very free with his personal criticisms of the members of the public involved in this discussion about specific design, at times characterizing them as 'advocates for some Mickey Mouse ideas' and taking great amounts of time to challenge the professional credentials of those present."

With the support and encouragement of Farr and other local elected officials, a group of local architects and design engineers prepared some alternative design concepts. Farr arranged for these concepts to be presented in May to Ken Jones, the Caltrans project engineer.

Farr wrote, "The designers were, in my view, treated poorly by your staff, and the notions advanced by the group were largely dismissed by Caltrans. On page 3 of Mr. Jones letter to me, he indicated that 'It is not worth the time required to see if corrections could be made. The basic concepts shown on all plans are impractical and unworkable.'"

Farr notes that Jones and Caltrans later did find several of the "basic concepts" to be workable, and that "this seems to raise the issue of good faith on Caltrans part...." If Caltrans was genuinely open to input from the community, why were these concepts initially rejected out of hand?

In a further attempt to impress on Caltrans and federal highway officials the importance of resolving community concerns about the design, Farr organized a large meeting at the Carmel Mission Inn on September 11 to discuss alternative design concepts developed by a committee of local architects. This meeting was attended by senior state and federal highway officials and about 50 local political leaders, business owners from the mouth of the Valley, and residents who have been involved in the planning process for the freeway. (See report in September 16 issue of the Sun.)

At this meeting, Caltrans agreed to changes in the Carpenter Street interchange and to reduce the cuts and fills in Hatton Canyon. A subsequent letter from Caltrans indicated the revised design will save five acres of pine trees as compared with the plan shown in the Draft Environmental Impact Report.

Caltrans also agreed to take another look at the Carmel Valley Road interchange and the "wall" leading to the proposed Rio Road overpass to see if changes could be made. An October 27 letter from Caltrans to Farr advised that this review concluded that no change is possible. Farr wrote that this was "a very distressing response to what I thought was a productive meeting." It was this "distressing" response that prompted Farr's lengthy letter criticizing Caltrans' intransigence.

Erosion Control Test

by state and other grants. Its work is guided by the Carmel River Advisory Committee (CRAC) appointed by the Water Management District.

Anthony deSugny, CRAC Chairman, told the Sun: "The Schulte project is our largest project to date. It definitely has something new. Rather than using concrete, it's the first project to use the low-cost approach of willow planting and post and wire revetments to contain the channel. It's a demonstration project in a highly visible area. Whether it works or not will be very evident over the years."

Matthews said that if it does work, it will serve as a model for seeking grant funding for similar work elsewhere along the river. Two years ago, riverfront property owners in the Boronda Road area voted to reject a Water Management District plan for an erosion control project in that area. That project was based on more traditional technology and would have been far more expensive, involving considerable cost to many property owners.

The first phase of the Schulte project, completed last fall, used traditional concrete riprap technology to protect the riverbank at the southern approach to Schulte Road bridge. In the second phase, done last fall and this spring, willows were planted to protect the most vulnerable banks.

In the current and final phase, 28,500 cubic yards of sand and gravel are being moved to relocate the river channel to its pre-erosion alignment. The channel was stable for many years with that alignment, and it is hoped to restore this stability.

"It's a demonstration project in a highly visible area. Whether it works or not will be very evident over the years."

Various measures are being taken to discourage the channel from shifting again.

The new channel is being "re-armored." Armoring refers to the tightly-packed layer of cobbles or larger stones that normally line the river channel in this area. The cobbles have been sorted from the sand and are being used to reline the channel.

The graded material on the terraces, above the channel, will be stabilized by 1,500 feet of post and wire revetments. Posts 15 feet long will be driven 12 feet into the ground. The posts will be connected with cables and woven wire mesh. When completed, these revetments will appear to be three-feet-high fences across the terrace at an angle to the channel. However, the mesh will also project three feet under ground.

These revetments are intended to stabilize the sand and gravel and keep the river in its designated channel. During high water, when the river flows over these terraces, the wire mesh will catch debris and slow the water flow, which in turn will cause the river to deposit more sediment in these areas.

Willows will be planted along the post and wire revetments and in other graded areas. They are planted by placing cuttings at two foot intervals in trenches three feet deep, then backfilling. They will be watered the first few summers with a drip irrigation system. When the willows are well-established, they will hold the sand and gravel in place, and the post and wire revetments will no longer be needed. By then, the wire may be covered by accumulated deposits of sediment. If not, the wire may be cut and removed.

The current project is scheduled for completion by December 12. Work is being done by Carmel Valley Construction Co. at a cost of $106,000.

Barbara Sherman, who lives along the river next to Schulte Road bridge, is "very pleased that something is finally being done. It's pathetic the way the river has been destroyed. We lost it because of the wells, so the entire community should pay for the work," Sherman believes.

Sherman has observed the river in this area for 30 years and fought erosion here for the past nine. She likes the Water Management District's plan but recognizes the risks. "I think it will work fine if we just have a couple winters of average rain to give the willows a chance to take hold. But if we have an extra-large storm, you can't tell what will happen," Sherman said.

Editor's Note: The author is a director of the Water Management District, so he is a participant in the events on which he is reporting.

Parks & Wildlife Bond Signatures Presented

Monterey County participants in a state wide bond drive for Parks and Wildlife preservation today presented signatures to qualify the measure for the June 1988 ballot. In attendance at the office of the Monterey County Registrar of Voters in Salinas were representatives from the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, the Sierra Club, the Native Plant Society, and the Monterey Regional Park District. A total of nearly 6,000 signatures raised entirely by volunteers were given to Betty Bloomer, Registrar, for verification.

"The proposed initiative is the most direct way for us to fund permanent preservation of our uniquely beautiful Monterey coastline," said Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, handing the petitions to Mrs. Bloomer. "This is our commitment to Future Generations."

The signature presentation in Salinas is part of a state-wide action, with similar submittals being made to county registrars in all counties throughout the state. Over 600,000 signatures have been gathered throughout the state. Only 372,000 valid signatures are needed to qualify the initiative for the ballot.

If approved by California voters state wide next June, the California Wildlife Coastal and Park Land Conservation initiative will provide $776,000,000 to preserve valuable park lands, wildlife habitat and critical coastal stretches.

In Monterey County $25 million will be earmarked specifically for "critical watershed" parcel acquisition in Big Sur, $2 million is scheduled for the Monterey County Peninsula Regional Park District projects, $1.5 million for preservation of coastal dunes in Monterey Bay, and $4 million for agricultural land preservation in the Salinas and Pajaro Valleys.

Supervisor Strasser Kauffman, who helped to spearhead the effort as part of the County's land use planning for the Big Sur Region, indicated that "the successful gathering of the required number of signatures to qualify this ballot for Monterey County is a true grass roots effort. It shows the commitment and dedication of our local population to the protection of environmentally sensitive and valuable public lands. Considering the small size of our population in contrast with the rest of the State, it is truly gratifying to have such a strong, positive response from our own local citizenry. We urge a "YES" vote in June to protect this area once and for all."
